for inclusion of seven subject fields (trades) namely Electronic Technology, Mechanical Engineering, Auto Engineering Technician, Repairs, Maintenance and rewinding of Electric Motor, Horticulture, Cookery, and Bakery & Confectionery under the Apprentices Act, 1961. The proposal was examined by a team of Technical Officers of the Ministry of Labour and found that courses are already covered under the Apprentices Act, 1961 by similar or other names for the category of Trade Apprentices. In view of the policy of the Government that duplication of trades/subject fields under the categories of Trade Apprentices and Technician (Vocational) Apprentices should be avoided, the above proposal of Govt. of Maharashtra could not be accepted.

A fresh proposal was received from Govt. of Maharashtra in August, 1997 for inclusion of the seven subject fields under the Apprentices Act, 1961. In the meantime, one of the seven subject fields namely "Horticulture" has been included under the Apprentices Act, 1961.

A decision was taken to constitute Subject Matter Expert Committee to examine the feasibility of inclusion of the remaining six subject fields in the category of Technician (Vocational) Apprentices under the Apprenticeship Training Scheme. Accordingly four Subject Matter Expert Committees have been constituted. Meetings of two Committees have been held and meetings of other Committees are scheduled to be held shortly.

The recommendations of the Expert Committees will be placed before the Central Apprenticeship Council (CAC), a statutory tri-partite body for their consideration and action will be implemented according to the recommendation of CAC.
